Day of the Dead Market

The Day of the Dead Market at 1000 Markets is a group of diverse artisans who appreciate Latino culture and celebrate the unique art and traditions of the Day of the Dead.

In their own words, "We are dedicated to bringing you colorful, quality items that hold a fine respect and honor this increasingly popular occasion. We are continually working toward developing a community of artisans who respect and honor the traditions of the Mexican culture and Dia de los Muertos specifically."

DIY Fall Arrangements with Fresh Roses

There's nothing quite like the beautiful blooms and delicate fragrance of roses to make a centerpiece really pop.

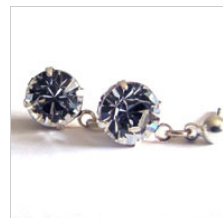

If you're anything like me, the idea of creating your own floral arrangement might be a little intimidating, but rest assured - a lovely bouquet of roses does practically all the work for you.

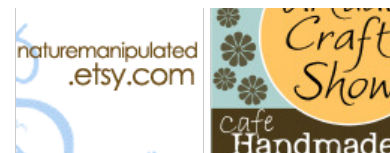

I was recently introduced to Passion Growers, a collection of state-of-the-art farms and greenhouses that provides more than 150 different varieties of roses...

Why Handmade? A Guest Post by Jai Johnson

My Bathroom Smells Great! Thanks to a 15-year-old Bar of Herbal Soap...

Granted, I spent about three times as much for this bar of soap when I purchased it from a local crafter at our flea market 15 years ago. The soap was $3.00 per bar, as opposed to the 75 cent bar I might have picked up at Wal-Mart. Yet I haven't had to buy any kind of "smell good" for my dressing area since.

Spotlight on Sarah Laubinger

Sarah Laubinger is a Massachusetts designer who uses the beauty of New England as inspiration for her unique line of Nantucket baskets and jewelry at Up My Sleeve Boutique.

Sarah escaped the corporate world of institutional real estate to spend more time with her family and soon discovered her passion for the centuries-old tradition of Nantucket basketry.

Sarah launched Up My Sleeve Boutique in January 2009...
